DECEMBER 30th

Date Fixed by United States Engineers

For Public Hearing on Big Sandy River Improvement, to be Held at Catlettsburg.

The Board of U. S. Engineers will have a public hearing at Catlettsburg on next Monday, Dec. 30th, to consider the proposition of continuing or abandoning the lock and dam system on Big Sandy river and its two forks. This will be the only hearing on this subject and a decision will be reached by the board within a short time thereafter.

All the counties of the Big Sandy valley should send representatives. The meeting has been fixed at an hour that will permit the delegates to make the round trip in one day. It will look very bad for any of the up-river counties to fail to have delegates present.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 20, 1912.

The Board of Engineer Officers charged with the duty of making a re-examination of Tug and Levisa forks of Big Sandy River, West Virginia and Kentucky, with a view to determining the advisability of continuing or abandoning the work of improvement on these streams by the Federal Government, will hold a public hearing in the U. S. Court Room, Federal Building, Catlettsburg, Ky., at 11 a. m. on December 30, 1912.

All parties interested are requested to be present at this hearing, where and when they will be given an opportunity to be heard in the matter.

It is desired that all matter to be submitted be in writing for submission to the board. What is primarily wanted is information relative to the commercial prospects for navigation if slack-water improvement is continued.

DAN C. KINGHAM.

Colonel, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, Senior Member of Board.

At a regular meeting of the Council of the City of Louisa the following resolutions were adopted:

"That the Council of the City of Louisa believes it to be indispensable to the best interests and progress of the Ohio Valley that the work of canalization of the Big Sandy River should be continued by the Government. This project was thoroughly and impartially investigated and approved in its inception by engineers and economists of superlative ability; and there has been no change in the conditions which originally obtained that would warrant or justify the abandonment of the work. The improvements heretofore completed have been unavailable because of the condition at the mouth of the Big Sandy River, a condition which will be fully remedied by the completion of Lock No. 29 in the Ohio River. We feel that the abandonment of the project now would not only render of no avail the large expenditure already made, but would also defeat the very object of the work heretofore done, viz: to reach and to render accessible, the marvelous coal deposits of the Big Sandy Valley. That object is of supreme importance to the whole Ohio Valley; failure to achieve it would be in the years to come a serious detriment to the manufacturing interests of a large section of the country; and its attainment will benefit directly and indirectly a large percentage of the population of the United States.

C. L. Miller, a member of the council, was directed to transmit to Major L. H. Rand, Corps Engineers, U. S. Army, a copy of the foregoing resolution. The following were appointed delegates to the meeting to be held at Catlettsburg, Ky., next Monday, Dec. 30:

Dr. L. H. York, Dr. G. W. Wroten, Dr. T. D. Burgess, D. J. Burchett, G. L. Walkershaw, W. T. Cain, T. S. Thompson, Judge Boggs, R. T. Burns, A. M. Hughes, F. H. Yates, D. C. Spencer, J. B. Crutcher, A. L. Burton, R. C. McClure, J. H. North-

up, G. W. Castle, A. J. Garred, W. D. O'Neal, A. O. Carter, F. R. Moore, Fred Sec, Fred Vinsen, F. L. Stevart, Sam Brenley, G. W. Atkinson, T. B. Billups, J. H. O'Brien, G. R. Burgess, C. F. See, Dr. Ira Wellman, J. A. Roberts, W. M. Fulkerson, Jas. Q. Lackey, Wm. Adams, Robert Dixon, Walter Clayton, F. D. Marcum, M. S. Burns, M. F. Conley, G. R. Vinson, E. E. Shannen, F. T. D. Wallace, Jr., H. B. Hewlett, J. P. Gartin, Mont Holt, J. H. Reynolds, W. D. Pierce, Augustus Snyder, and Wm. Justice.

And the members of the city council.

WHITE AND QUIET.

To the delight of some and the disgust of many three or four inches of the so-called Beautiful Snow fell Monday night and brought the White Christmas so much desired. The day itself was very quietly observed, an almost Sabbath stillness settling over the white-robed town. Family dining parties were numerous, to be succeeded by bash parties later on. The NEWS doubts if any one in Louisa went to bed hungry Christmas night. Our people are not forgetful of those among them who are less favored by fortune, and many a well filled basket and comforting bundle went where most good would be done.

To its friends and patrons the Big Sandy News sends a greeting and wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

MOSE GOT HIS.

Hamilton, O., Dec. 19.—Mose Feltner, lone surviving participant in the county, Kentucky, was fined $50 and costs and give a four months' workhouse sentence here last night by Judge Gird, in the Juvenile Court, for keeping a notorious saloon and selling liquor to minors. The saloon was ordered closed.

DEATH HOURLY EXPECTED.

Mrs. William Davis is at the home of her son-in-law, Sam Barram, this city, in a critical condition as a result of a paralytic stroke. She may die at any moment.

ALL HAIL "HITCHINS."

Carter County's New Town with World's Largest Firebrick Plant.

If one should search the atlas for the town of "Hitchins" in the State of Kentucky he would search in vain. Consequently when a dispatch under a "Hitchins, Ky.," date tells of the opening of "the largest and most modern firebrick plant in the world" at that place the news is likely to excite some curiosity.

"Hitchins" is not a new town, but is an old town under a new name. It is located in Carter county, at the intersection of the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Eastern Kentucky railways. Hitherto it has appeared on the map as "E. K. Junction," an abbreviation, of course, for Eastern Kentucky Junction, which is rather too cumbersome for railroad men and map makers in this progressive age. In the Postal Guide the place has been known as "Anglin." That name seems short enough for commercial purposes, but Carter county believes in honoring its captains of industry and, as E. S. Hitchins is at the head of the mammoth enterprise which has been started there, "E. K. Junction" objects to call itself "Hitchins" and to hitch its wagons to an industrial star of the first magnitude. Which seems altogether right and appropriate.

"Five thousand barrels of cement and two million pounds of steel," the dispatch tells us, "were used in the construction of the plant, which covers 75,000 square feet of floor space. It has been sixteen months in process of erection and 'will be run day and night, with a capacity of 700,000 firebrick a day.' That in the parlance of the day, is 'going some'—and amply justifies the rechristened town in doing some hornblowing. Under such circumstances 'Hitchins' sounds pretty good to persons who are hoping for a bigger, better and busier industrial Kentucky.—Courier Journal.

MRS. REBECCA GALLUP

Aged Catlettsburg Woman Has Gone to Her Reward.

After a long period of ill health Mrs. Rebecca Gallup died at her home in Catlettsburg at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening last. She was buried beside her husband in the cemetery at Ashland Friday afternoon. The deceased is survived by one child, Frederick Gallup, of Catlettsburg, and one brother, Mr. F. R. Moore, of Louisa, and numerous nephews and nieces. Her husband, Col. G. W. Gallup, and one son, Harry, died many years ago.

Mrs. Gallup was in the 78th year of her age and was born near what is now called Fort Gay, W. Va. She was the daughter of the late Fred Moore, a pioneer of this section and in his day one of the most prominent men in West Virginia. Her death leaves Mr. F. R. Moore the sole survivor of a numerous and influential family. In early life she was married to Col. G. W. Gallup, a gallant soldier of the Civil War serving as commanding officer of the 14th Ky. Volunteer Infantry. For several years Mrs. Gallup with her husband and boys lived in the house now occupied by A. J. Garred. The house was built by Col. Gallup, and there was dispensed a hospitality of the old-time Kentucky sort. Mrs. Gallup was, if the NEWS mistakes not, the youngest of the Moore sisters and was in every respect a most estimable woman. She was refined in manner, gentle and amiable in disposition, hospitable to a degree, popular with all and loved by everybody. Until stricken by partial paralysis some months ago Mrs. Gallup was active for one of her age, and even when the second seizure occurred about a week ago she was hopeful that she would live much longer. Her death removes a prominent personage and her loss is keenly felt by her many relatives and friends.

Mr. Moore was at the bedside of his last sister when the last summons came.

WAS VERY ILL.

Mrs. William Clarke was taken suddenly ill on Saturday last with uremia, and for some time her life was despaired of. She had several convulsions and was unconscious. She is now much better and is considered out of danger. Mr. Clarke, who has employment at Jenkins, was sent for and arrived three or four days ago. Mrs. Clarke was formerly Mrs. Daisy Westlake.

A DELIGHTFUL SHOWER.

The "shower" given on Saturday night last in honor of Miss Bessie Snyder, who on the morning of Saturday, Dec. 28, will become Mrs. Arch C. McClure, was a very pleasing affair. It "fell" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. McClure, uncle and aunt of the bride elect, and was witnessed by a goodly number of relatives and friends. The comfortable home was attractive in its lights and its decorations, while the warmth of a gracious Kentucky hospitality pervaded the atmosphere. Several tables had been prepared for the devotees of Pinch, and several games were played. At their conclusion a most delightful chicken salad course was served, and while all did not indulge in the games none declined to aid in the disappearance of the delicious salad, prepared as only Louisa women can make it. This being over the company invaded the dining room, where punch of the most approved make was served. This prepared the way for cake, and cake, of course, called for more punch, and there was enough and to spare. While at the punch table a heart shaped cake was cut which contained the various articles which are said to bring luck of various kinds to those who get them. Miss Belle Vaughan found a ring in her slice, a dime was the portion of Miss Mattie Wallace, a darning needle winked its solitary eye at Miss Opal Spencer, and Mrs. Carrie Snyder Burns found a tiny wheel.

After the company had again assembled in the drawing room a couple of colored maids brought a large clothes basket, filled with the presents which had been received by Miss Snyder. The basket was placed at her feet, and one by one she took out the beautiful articles naming the donor as she held it up for inspection. It was during this interesting proceeding that a sure enough shower fell—a shower of tears from the recipient of so many nice and useful things.

It was very close to the next day when all said "good night," wishing the bride to be much happiness and a long life.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN PEOPLE

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 19.—To ascertain if it is more profitable to raise cow peas and cattle for the market than to run an illicit still, a resident of Morgan county, who is now serving a jail sentence in that county for bootlegging, will engage in the farming and cattle raising business when he has served his jail sentence.

This incident was reported to the Department of Agriculture today by Mrs. Ellen Walcutt, of Shelbyville, who has been attending the County Farmers' institutes and speaking on farming. Mrs. Walcutt says that the farmers in the mountain sections of this State do not know what crops to raise and how to raise them. She also finds that parents do not know what to feed their children. In a large number of homes visited by Mrs. Walcutt, she found that the children existed mainly on fat meat and poor bread. The farmers do not raise vegetables for the table, and Mrs. Walcutt is of the opinion that the Department of Agriculture can do much to improve the conditions among the farmers of the mountains.

KENTUCKY NORMAL COLLEGE.

Preparations are being made to receive the large number of students who will enter K. N. C. at Louisa for the winter term beginning Jan. 6th. They are coming from all directions.

HAS MOVED TO JENKINS.

Roy Carter and family have moved to the mining town of Jenkins, where he will operate a hotel and boarding house.

BOY'S CORN CLUBS.

Excellent Showing Made Throughout the State of Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 21.—"What the completed statistics of Boys' Corn Club reports are going to show," said Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman, "that about 500 of them have succeeded in producing an average of seventy-five bushels of corn to the acre on all sorts of land in all parts of the State. The average yield an acre for Kentucky farmers is twenty-five bushels. If the farmers inquire how the boys accomplished this they will discover among other things that the boys plowed their ground eight to ten inches deep. My observation is that the average farmer plows two or three inches deep. It takes stronger horses to plow deep, but the returns justify the investment in better horses, as the Boys' Corn Club figures will show. They have shown what can be done on Kentucky land. If a farmer will emulate their example and raise twice as much corn on ten acres as he has been raising on twenty, at approximately half the investment and, certainly, not as much labor, it will help pay the State's debts and multiply the material wealth of the Commonwealth."

Commissioner Newman went to Morehead to-day to organize the Apple Growers' Association, which has 1,000 acres pledged for orchard land.

OIL NEWS.

The Norwood well at Torchlight is reported to be showing up nicely since it was shot. A pumping outfit has been ordered.

The Tabors Creek company has closed a contract with J. L. Gussler, of Huntington to start a well at once. This is in West Virginia, about three miles north of Louisa.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Little Daughter of Harry Mayes Fatally Burned.

The four years old daughter of Harry Mayes, living at Dave Wellman's, this city, was terribly burned shortly after noon Tuesday. It's the old story of an open grate. The little one was standing in front of it, with her back to the fire, when her dress touched the grate and in a moment she was in flames. She was burned almost from head to foot, her neck, back and legs suffering most. The worst burn is in the left arm pit. Dr. Ira Wellman was called and dressed the burns. The child is suffering very much. Thus again in this shocking way, is the lesson of the unscreened fireplace brought home to our people. Sooner or later it comes to all who think there is no danger where fire is kept in a grate or a fireplace without a screen.

LATER. The child died Wednesday afternoon.

SPRADLIN—WADE.

The NEWS was hoping to hear of a matrimonial event to round out the measure of Christmas festivities, when the train from Paintsville rolled in on time, bearing Mr. and Mrs. John Wade. The bride was up to a few hours before her coming to Louisa, Miss Frankie Spradlin, of Paintsville. The groom was John Wade, formerly of this city but now of Van Lear, where he is freight agent for the Van Lear Coal Co. The marriage occurred at the home of the bride.

The interesting event was celebrated on Christmas. The young people were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Miller during their short stay in Louisa, leaving Thursday morning for Van Lear, where they will reside. They were accompanied to this city by Misses Ethel Kirk, Marcella Butler, Ona Vaughan and Jennie Spradlin, and Messrs. McKinley Preston and Colie Powell.

The youthful pair have the best wishes of their many friends.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

C. T. Lynch, a young married man and tool dresser employed in the oil fields at Yawkey in Lincoln co. was burned to death in a most unusual manner Saturday afternoon. The body was prepared for interment here to-day by the Johnston Undertaking Company and forwarded to the decedent's home in Ritchie county.

Lynch was at work when the terrible accident occurred. He had stuffed a lot of greasy waste in his hip pockets and was standing in front of a fire warming, when the waste ignited. In a flash he was wrapped in flames from head to foot, his clothing being filled with oil. The suffering victim dashed into a huge tank of cold water nearby, but in some years ago a Hoosier farmer began to breed fine seed corn. At one of the great national corn shows held at Chicago, he took the first prize for a single ear of corn. The rule governing this exhibit was that the ear taking first prize became the property of the corn show. The farmer was in despair until he learned that this "best ear in the world" would be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. He determined he must keep this ear of corn for seed on his own farm at any cost. He bought the ear for $500.

Every one said he was crazy to pay such a price for a single ear of corn. Of course any other ear of the same weight and costing about 1 1/2 cents would have fed as much stock or made as many cornmeal batter cakes for breakfast. Why was he willing to pay such a huge price for the corn? He was not buying corn at all. He was buying the brains behind its production.

Raw material is cheap; the amount of brains mixed with it in its manufacture fixes its market value. A piece of window glass is cheap; a watch crystal is more expensive; a lens for a fine camera is quite expensive; the objective for a great telescope may cost a small fortune. What is true of corn or any raw material is true of men. A fine, strong, vigorous man can be bought for $2 as a laborer.

Mix brains enough for him to handle a section gang, and he will bring $3 per day.

Mix brains enough to fit him for a conductor, and he will bring $4 to $5 per day on the market.

Enough brains to handle a great railroad system, and he brings $100 per day on the open market.

All values in the market of the world are educated brain values. The cheapest education is the best, for the efficient, well educated man is the high priced commodity.

TUBERCULOSIS CURE.

Berlin, Dec. 19.—Dr. Hermann Friedmann, purported discoverer of a preventive and cure for tuberculosis, opened yesterday his first institute for demonstration. He inoculated with his serum several patients, men, women and children, in the presence of eminent physicians and scientists from Berlin, London, Paris and other cities of Europe and America. Dr. Friedmann still refuses to give out any of his serum, saying that from a tiny drop of it a bacteriologist could propagate enough of the bacilli to supply the world.

The respected discovery of Dr. Friedmann is attracting the attention of the most eminent physicians of the world. The medical journals, even those of the most conservative class, are devoting much of their space to the serum and what its possibilities are. It may prove to be the long sought for preventive.

APPLES FROM LAWRENCE.

Mr. J. L. Vaughan, of near Louisa, was up here this week with some sample Rome Beauty apples that would have done credit to any fruit grower. This is another demonstration that Big Sandy is well adapted to the cultivation of fruit. He said that he had more than one hundred bushels of these toothsome apples for Santa Claus to distribute Christmas.—Prestonsburg Mountaineer.

A NEW PRINCIPAL.

Mr. M. M. Morelock, principal of the Sandy Valley Seminary, Paintsville, has resigned and the trustees have appointed the Rev. John W. Granberry, pastor of the M. E. Church South, to take charge for the remainder of the school year. Mr. Granberry has accepted the appointment.

KILLING IN JOHNSON CO.

Gip McGuire shot and instantly killed Romeo Crider near Dewev, Johnson county, a few days ago. The men were partners in a timber job and the trouble is said to have arisen about a settlement of their affairs. Crider was unmarried. McGuire has a family.

PROPER CREDIT.

State Inspector Goodpastor is credited by the newspapers with having collected from county officials the sum of $2228. The investigation of their books and the collection of the amounts due the State was done by Deputy Inspector G. W. Castle, of this city.

SUFFERED A STROKE.

On Sunday, the 16th, William Caperton, of this city, suffered a severe stroke of paralysis and is at this time but little, if at all, improved. Dr. Ira Wellman is attending the case.

BADLY BURNED.

Fred Roberts, machinist's assistant, C. & O. railway, was badly burned on the left hand and leg on Wednesday of last week while at work on an engine in Ashland. He is a son of Jasper (Jake) Roberts, of near Louisa.

LOST—A MUFF.

LOST. From a huggy a few days ago, between Louisa and the pumping station at Buysville, a large Sable rag muff. Return to John Bahan at Louisa or to this office and receive reward.

It is said that there are some cases of smallpox on Boltsfork, in Boyd county.

Washington, D. C.—War claims of West Virginians amounting to about $149,000 have been stricken from the omnibus war claims bill by the senate. The senate committee on claims reported the bill at the last session of congress with every item in it for West Virginia stricken out except six. The senate has agreed to the report of the committee, with the understanding that the house will refuse to agree to the cutting out of the items and will ask a conference. It is thought that some of the items may be reinstated in the bill in conference and that the two houses will then pass it.

Charleston.—Governor Wm. E.
Glasscock announced today that he would convene the West Virginia legislature in extraordinary session January 2, six days before the regular session, to give more time for the consideration of important business.

Among the measures which the governor will include in the call for consideration during the extraordinary session are county salaries;
the report of the mine commission which has just been transmitted to him, an employer's liability act, and primary election and corrupt practices acts.

A subject for general discussion in the stores and other places where men congregate of evenings in this part of the county, is the proposed cutting off of Wayne county Ceredo district and attaching the same to Cabell county. While many favor the proposition others do not, but if it ever comes to a vote it might carry. We believe, however, the people of this district—especially the taxpayers—would make a grave mistake in voting to leave old Wayne, which is free of debt, and joining a county that has a large bonded indebtedness.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs.
H. M. Shant was choked to death in its high chair at the home Friday morning.

The pathetic tragedy almost prostrated the mother, who had left the baby alone for a few minutes, while attending to some household duties in another room. She was near enough to have heard the child had made any noise and at no time did she have the least intimation that anything was wrong. When she entered the room again she was horrified to see her little one hanging from the straps that are used on such chairs, the life entirely gone.

It is presumed that, as babies will the little one had slipped forward in its chair until its neck was caught by the fastening on the chair instantly strangling it and preventing all outcry.—Huntington Republican.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Representative James A. Hughes of Huntington, W. Va., requested Postoffice Department officials to-day to designate a two-and-three-quarter-mile strip of roadway between Huntington, W. Va., and Ashland, Ky., for the Government's good road building experiment in his state.

An appropriation of $10,000 for this purpose in every state of the Union has already been made. He plans to have Wayne-co. through which the strip runs, donate $10,- 000 and to raise another $10,000 by popular subscription.

With this and the $10,000 Government appropriation he plans a

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 18.—

years, the oldest woman in the ner this morning after a long illness.

Huntington people will be able to obtain gas at a very low rate after January 1st, 1913. A company of its own citizens have purchased a large boundary near Branchland, pleted a line piping it into the city.

The line passes through this county from Winslow down Beech Fork, a distance of three or four miles.

A bill will be introduced in the legislature at the coming session which abolishes the sale and manufacture of either cigarettes or cigarette paper in the state. The bill also makes it a crime to give either away.

An unknown man was literally cut to pieces by a west hound N. & W. train Wednesday morning. He had evidently made a bed of the tracks,
three miles this side of Williamson.
So terribly was the body mutilated that identification is out of the question. The victim was clad in overalls and did not have a scrap of paper in his pockets.

Six Democratic candidates for offices in Lee and Williamson districts were awarded temporary writs of mandamus Thursday by the state supreme court. The Mingo county court is required to issue them certificates of election.

Those who profit by this proceeding are Messrs. Floyd and Varney, the democratic candidates for magistrate in Lee district; J. F. Keyser and W. Z. Cantrell, democratic candidates for magistrate and Wm. Wil-lamson and Lloyd Alley, Democratic candidates for constable in Williamson district.

These gentlemen were elected on the face of the returns but a recount was demanded and secured.
The recount reversed the result,
showing the election of the Republican candidates and they were given certificates of election.

The Democratic candidates thereupon brought mandamus proceedings as well as the usual contests. They alleged that the ballots at the time of the recount were not the best evidence of the result of the election and that they were not in the same condition as when placed in the ballot boxes by the officers of the election.

Evidence was taken by both sides here during the past week and the interested parties went to Charleston and submitted the case on Wednesday, Attorney G. R. C. Willes appeared for the Democratic candidates and Attorneys John L. Stafford and John S. Marcum for the county court.

It is understood that the manda-mus does not affect the two Republican candidates for constable in Lee district, Messrs. J. O. Young and Floyd Hall, both of whom were elected on the face of the returns.

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 18.—
Charged with the most vicious offense the catalog of crime, Rev.
W. J. Hubbard, until a few days ago State Superintendent of the Children's Home Society of West Virginia, having in charge the Davis Child's Shelter on Washington street
is wanted by the officers of the law.
The crime alleged is that of criminally
violating an eleven-year-old girl
inmate of the shelter, who after Hubard had left for his old home in Viginia to remain about a week, informed the matron at the shelter, Miss Sara H. Emrick, of the alleged criminal actions of the superintendent.
The child was fearful lest she be killed by the preacher for telling her story, but after being assured that he would not return, told of the criminal relationship.

Three physicians were yesterday called to see the child. She is suffering from fright, but her condition other wise is not considered of such a character as to give alarm.
The tot is one of the smallest, as well as one of the most likable children among the 35 now at the shelter. She is pretty and her ways have been such as to endear her
to all those about the institution, including the boys and girls, all of whom are her friends.

It was three days ago that Hubbard was apprised by wire that he mother's home in Williamson, W.

Va. The girl recently came here from Detroit, where she had worked in a candy factory.

According to her story to the police, she left home one night, cut off her hair and went to Philadelphia, where, after purchasing male a-tire, she obtained work in a holler shop. After she went to Scranton, Pa., where for two weeks she helped drill and shoot coal. Finding that work very hard she got a place driving mules in a coal mine, but shortly afterwards went to Erie, Pa., where she went to work in a paper mill. Later she said she worked in a foundry where her uncle found her.

"I would gladly wear men's clothing again, if I had the strength for heavy work, declared the girl.

Mrs. Malon Hall and Mrs. Hal-ago State Superintendent of the Children's Home Society of West Virginia, having in charge the Davis
Child's Shelter on Washington street
is wanted by the officers of the law.

The crime alleged is that of criminally
violating an eleven-year-old girl
inmate of the shelter, who after Hu-
bard had left for his old home in Vi-
ginia to remain about a week, informed the matron at the shelter, Miss Sara H. Emrick, of the alleged criminal actions of the superintendent.

The child was fearful lest she be killed by the preacher for telling her
story, but after being assured that he would not return, told of the criminal relationship.

Three physicians were yesterday
called to see the child. She is suffering from fright, but her condition other wise is not considered of such a character as to give alarm.

The tot is one of the smallest, as
well as one of the most likable
children among the 35 now at the shelter. She is pretty and her ways
have been such as to endear her
to all those about the institution,
including the boys and girls, all of whom are her friends.

bard was apprised by wire that he

Henry Frazier, victim of Hoodoo bridge at Wilsandale, W. Va., will recover. Frazier is the first one out of five fireman injured on the fatal bridge to come out of the creek alive. There is a superstitious horror among N. & W. railroaders, in regard to the structure.

Henry Frazier, who was torn from the cab of a passing locomotive by the bridge at Wilsandale and hurled thirty feet down an embankment into the creek is the first man to be taken from the water alive.

Frazier, who was frightfully lacerated about the face and head will escape with the loss of his right eye and a few scars on his face and head. Railroad men around Ceredo and Kenova are happy over the fortunate escape of Frazier and claim that the "hoodoo bridge" has lost its unnatural power and from this time on the whistle for the Dingess tunnel will not bring the vague feeling of terror to the train men that it has before.

IN MEMORY.

In loving remembrance of Mrs. Hattie Miller Hensley, who departed this life Dec. 13, 1912. She was born May the 6th, 1895, age 17 yrs 7 mo and 8 days. She was the loving daughter of George and Belle Miller. Was married to Eugene Hensley March 13, 1909. To this union was born one child who preceded her to the better land Sept. 22, 1912. Hattie united herself to the United Baptist church in 1907 and since lived a true Christian. Hattie was a kind loving woman. No one knew her but to love her. She had been sick for nearly two years with consumption. All was done that loving hands could do to keep her with us but all in vain. She bore her suffering well, trusting in the Lord for all things. She often said she was ready and willing to die and was heard to pray to the Lord to relieve her from her suffering. She is missed by her loving husband, kind father and mother, sister and brothers, and her many friends. While our home is sad and all is dark within, Hattie is with her darling baby. Weep not friends, those that have no hopes for some day you will meet your darling Hattie. I say to her many friends to strive to live close to the Lord. She wrote some time before her death in a book telling where she wanted to be hurried and who she wanted to preach her funeral and her request was fulfilled.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Albert H. Miller in the Gallup church, after which her loved body was taken to the McClure graveyard, there laid to rest by her little Alka and other loved ones to sleep till the dead and Christ shall rise.

action for the tax year of 1912. Auditor H. M. Bosworth makes it emphatic that the figures furnished for the 1912 valuations and taxes are only "partial" valuations.

State Auditor Bosworth, acting upon an opinion from Attorney General Garnett, declined to issue a warrant in favor of Superintendent Barkdale Hamlett for December salary as Inspector of Schools, and the superintendent declined he will bring suit.

Claiming that they had broken the egg market in Chicago, the women have discontinued the sale. On Saturday they sold 1,100,000 eggs and broke the "corner."

Good for the women. Hope they broke the men who made the corner.

President Taft has made up his mind to accept the offer of the Kent professorship of law of Yale, and probably will take up his duties at New Haven early in the spring.

The analogy between the Yale professorship and Grover Cleveland's relation to Princeton appealed to Mr. Taft strongly, and when many of his close friends and advisers wrote to him, approving his acceptance of the chair at Yale, he decided to take it.

There is an "other" analogy which "appeals" to the public. Mr. Taft had not been President six months until some one said that, speaking after the manner of the geography, Mr. Taft was "a large, good natured man, entirely surrounded by fellows who knew what they wanted"—and got it.

And here's where the analogy between Taft and Grover Cleveland falls.

That he will consider all recommendations before making any announcements of the personnel of his Cabinet and that the announcement of the entire make-up of his advisory board will be made about March 1, was the declaration of President-elect Wilson recently.

WONDERFUL PRODUCERS.

The last report of Secretary Wilson, as head of the Department of Agriculture, which covers the achievements of sixteen years, the time "Tama Jim" has served as chief of this great branch of the government service, is crowded with interesting facts and shows what a marvelous growth the country has had since Mr. Wilson came to the chieftship of the department. The dairy cow is one of the principal producers of wealth on the farm and the value of her products in 1912 is estimated at about $830,000,000, an amount which exceeds the value of the cotton lint and is nearly equal to the combined value of lint and seed.

The lowly hen is another of the wonderful producers, it being estimated that she laid during the year 1912, 1,700,000,000 dozen eggs and if an egg is only worth a cent and three quarters it gives the tidy sum of $350,000,000, and if this is added to the value of the fowls raised, the products of the poultry industry on farms amounts to about $570,000,000. This nearly equals the value of the wheat crop.

The animals sold from the farm and the animals slaughtered on it together number about 111,000,000, and the farm value of these animals is estimated at $1,930,000,000.

Most productive of all agricultural years in this country has been 1912, declares the report. The earth has produced its greatest annual dividend. The sum and the rain and the fertility of the soil paid no heed to human controversies, but kept on working in cooperation with the farmers' efforts to utilize them. The reward is a high general level of production. The man behind the plow has filled the Nation's larder, crammed the storehouses, and will send liberal supplies to foreign countries.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150.00 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by Louisa Drug Co.

NOTICE.

The County Board of Education will meet in my office, Thursday, Jan. 2, 1913 at 10 o'clock. There will be a two day's session. The first day will be devoted to regular business and at the Friday's session the Board will take up the question of old debts and we trust that all parties who hold claims for debts against the various school districts contracted prior to 1908, will present them at this time together with proof sufficient to establish their legality.

This will be the last meeting also, for the consideration of 1912 claims and parties failing to have their claims allowed at this meeting will have to wait until next Fall for their money.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN.

COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE AT EVENING TIDE.

Let us try to be gentle and helpful to our neighbor but above all let us be so to our home folks.

There are very different thoughts born within a man well nourished, and one miserable and hungry.

Here is a rule for those who would be happy instead of miserable: Forget self entirely, think of what others think and want, strive to make them happy and do not worry over what people think and say.

Three things to cultivate—good books, good friends and good humor.

There is many a good wife who can't sing, play the piano or dance well.

Not so much in the putting on of alms or fine and costly apparel, bespeaks the lady or the gentleman, as does politeness and good manners.

No one ever lost money, temper, character or the esteem of others, by being truly polite at home, in public gatherings, in business, on the street, in school or church.

The person who wantonly puts a thorn in the loving heart of a little child will feel the rankling of that thorn in his or her own heart some day, in a wound no later repentance can ever heal.

A man cannot tell what the needs of women and children are, because he is not one of them. He will remember well enough, however, he did not run to his father but to his mother in infancy; and this will be sufficient argument if he be a fair minded man, to show him that in the management of women and children, women ought to have an authoritative say.

Discouragements and gloominess are things to be avoided like the pestilence; cheerfulness and merriment are qualities to cultivate. Before them annoyances will disappear like dew before the sun. A happy disposition is a fortune in itself.

If you have a home and are out of debt, don't fret and worry yourself and your good wife into the grave for the sake of making money. You have but one life to live and it is brief at best. Take a little pleasure and comfort as you go day by day, and try to do a little good to others. A morbid, insatiable desire to possess the earth, to grab everything in sight, is at the foundation of more misery than almost any one thing. Wealth alone will never keep your memory green after you are gone; a good life and kind actions will.

Never choose a friend who would urge you to pull out a single thread from the warp of character. Never choose for a friend one that you feel you have lowered your standard of purity and right one single inch to gain. If you cannot step up in our friendships you need not step down. Raise your standard and stand by it.

There is nothing that so alleviates sorrow, relieves feelings oppressed, lightens the burdens of life, inspires with hope or electrifies with joy as does music. Wrath, ill-will, hatred, quarrelsomeness melt before it; it pacifies, gladdens and brings peace, and the home without its songs or sweet vibrations loses half its charms and hence every home that

LUCK.

Good luck is a twin brother of hard work.

Hard luck is almost a synonym for laziness.

Luck walks while work rides in a carriage.

Luck pictures a dollar while work earns it.

Luck dreams of a home while work builds one.

To trust to luck is like fishing with a hookless line.

Luck is a disease for which hard work is the only remedy.

Lucks longs for a dinner while labor goes out and earns one.

Luck is a weather vane with distinguished points broken off.

Luck goes barefooted while work never lacks for a pair of shoes.

The man who relies on luck is lucky if he keeps out of the poorhouse.

Luck takes a nap while brains and hard work are winning points.

A cheerful atmosphere is important to a happy home life. It is hard for children to be good when they are exposed to an incessant hail storm of fault-finding from their parents. It is very difficult for a wife to maintain a calm and charmingly sweet demeanor when her husband is critical or sulky, and takes all her tender efforts with difficult appreciation.

You want your wife to be cheerful and brighten your life all she can. Very good and now as a help toward this end, suppose you try to be cheerful and shed a few rays of brightness upon her pathway.

IT MUST BE TRUE.

Louisa Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Louisa, but a number of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is out of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills:

Mrs. Lewis, Franklin St., Louisa, Ky., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up fine. I used seven or eight boxes and they completely rid me of kidney complaints. I am pleased to confirm the statement I give in 1908 praising them." (Statement given January 3, 1912.)

On January 27, 1908 Mrs. Lewis said: "For a long time I suffered from various symptoms of kidney complaint. I experimented with many remedies but found no benefit until I took Doan's Kidney Pills. This preparation given me freedom from spells of backache, strengthened my kidneys and bladder and improved my health in every way. I have been convinced of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Ben Gosney, of Campton, Monday night lost his barn and all the contents therein. Four work mules, valued at $750, perished in the fire; 500 bushels of corn; a quantity of hay and fodder; two wagons, worth $65 each. Our informant says that the origin of the fire is variously attributed, namely, boys shooting firecrackers promiscuously, a shotgun being fired close to ignitable matter, or cardplayers' careless smoking. The barn itself did not belong to Mr. Gosney, it being the property of Dave Millor.

mirrors extending from floor to ceiling, causing the more distant dancers to appear circling in space. Brilliantly illuminated by means of hanging chandeliers that oscillated slightly to the merry foot; decorated lavishly everywhere with festooned flags and tastefully arranged mounds of war; gay with the druse uniforms of the men and the handsome gowns of the women; it composed a scene so different from any I had looked upon in years as to hold me fascinated. The constant clatter of tongues, the merry laughter, the flashing of bright eyes, and the gleam of ivory shoulders, the good-humored glances caught as the various couples circled swiftly past, the quick gliding of flying feet over the green floor, the continuous whirl of the intoxicating waltz, and over all the inspiring strains of Strauss, caused my heart to bound, and brought with it an insatiable desire to participate.

Yet gazing, entranced, upon the animated scene, and feeling deeply the intoxication of the moment, my eyes were eagerly searching that happy throng for sight of one dear woman's face. Strange as it must seem to others, in spite of the fact that to meet her might mean betrayal and death, I might even result in the destruction of an army—in my weakness I secretly longed for just such a happening; felt indeed, that I must again see her, have speech with her, before I went forth alone into the manifold dangers of the night. It was foolishness, insanity in very truth; yet such was the secret yearning of my heart. If I could only once know from her own truthful lips, that she already belonged to another, I could, I believe, tear her image from my memory; but while I yet doubted (and in spite of all I had heard I doubted still), no desperate case should ever prevent my seeking her with all the mad ardor of love, no faintness of heart should intervene between us. That she was present I knew from those chance words overheard in the chimney, and my one deep hope ever since I donned that Federal uniform and ventured down the stairs (a hope most oddly mingled with dread) was that we might in some manner be brought together. If I was yet vainly seeking a glimpse of her among the many who circled past, when I was suddenly recalled to the extreme delicacy of my situation by the deep voice of the Major asking me a direct question:

"Do you ever dance, Colonel?" Exactly what I may have replied I know not, but it was evidently translated as an affirmative, for in another moment I was being piloted down the side of the long room; while he gazed in my rather inattentive ear.

"As you have doubtless remarked, Colonel, we are extremely fortunate in our ladies to-night. By Jove, they would grace an inauguration ball at Washington. So many officers' wives have joined us tonight, supposing we would make permanent camp here, and besides there are more loyal families in this neighborhood than we find usually. At least their loyalty is quite apparent while we remain. Then the General Hospital nurses are not especially busy, no battle lately, you know, and there are some devoted pretty girls among them. Ball-room looks nice, don't you think?"

"Extremely well; the decorations are in most excellent taste." "Entirely the work of the staff. Great pity so many were compelled to be absent, but a soldier can never tell. Here upon special duty, Colonel?"

"I brought despatches from the President to General Sheridan." "Wish you might remain with us permanently. Your command, I believe, is not connected with our Eastern army?"

"No, with Thomas in the Cumberland." "Ah, yes; had some very pretty women out there; I understand—oh, pardon me, Miss Minor, permit me to present to you Colonel Curran, of the Sixth Ohio Light Artillery, of the Halleck's staff. This Colonel, here, is as able a dancer as he is a soldier, and his high compliments and abilities could possibly be paid. Miss Minor, Colonel, is a native Virginian, who is present under protest, doubtless to capture some officer, and thus weaken the army pleasantly to the bright woman facing me, and not to escape the Major's inquiries at once begged for the reason of the walls. The request being granted, and in another moment we were threading our way through numerous couples upon the green floor. She proved so delightful a partner that I simply yielded myself to the enjoyment of the measure, and conversation lapsed, until a sudden cessation of the music left us stranded so close to the fireplace that the very sight of it brought a vivid realization of my perilous position. If I had not, my companion's chance remark must assuredly would.

"How easily you waltz!" she said enthusiastically, her sparkling eyes and flushed cheeks testifying to her keen enjoyment. "So many find me difficult to keep step with that I have become fearful of venturing upon the floor with a stranger. However, I shall always be glad to give you a character to any of my friends."

"I sincerely thank you," I returned in the same spirit, "and I can certainly return that compliment most heartily. It is so long since I was privileged to dance with a lady that I confess to having felt decidedly awkward at the start, but your step proved so accommodating that I became at once at home, and enjoyed the waltz immensely. I fail to discover any seats in the room, or I should endeavor to find one vacant for you."

"Oh, I am not in the least tired," she was looking at me with so deep an expression of interest in her eyes that I dimly wondered at it.

"Did I understand rightly," she asked, playing idly with her fan, "that Major Monsoon introduced you to me as Colonel Curran of General Halleck's staff?"

What the deuce am I up against now? I thought, and my heart beat quickly. Yet retreat was impossible, and I answered with assumed carelessness:

"I am, most assuredly, Colonel Curran."

"From Ohio?" This was certainly coming after me with a vengeance, and I stole one quick glance at the girl's face. It was devoid of suspicion, merely evincing a polite interest.

"I have the honor of commanding the Sixth Artillery Regiment from that State."

"You must pardon me, Colonel, for my seeming inquisitiveness," and her eyes sparkled with demure mischief. "Yet I cannot quite understand. I was at school in Connecticut with a Miss Curran whose father was an officer of artillery from Ohio, and, naturally, I at once thought of her when the Major pronounced your name; yet it certainly cannot be you—you are altogether too young, for Myrtle must be eighteen."

I laughed, decidedly rattled from what I feared might prove a most awkward situation.

"Well, yes, Miss Minor, I am indeed somewhat youthful to be Myrtle's father," I said at a venture, "but I might serve as her brother, you know, and not stretch the point of age overmuch."

She clasped her hands on my arm with a gesture of delight.

"Oh, I am so glad; I knew Myrtle had a brother, but never heard he also was in the army. Did you know, Colonel, she was intending to come down here with me when I returned South, at the close of our school year, but from some cause was disappointed. How delighted she would have been to meet you! I shall certainly write and tell her what a splendidly romantic time we had together. You look so much like Myrtle I wonder I failed to recognize you at once."

She was rattling on without affording me the slightest opportunity to slip in a word explanatory, when her glance chanced to fall upon some one who was approaching us through the throng.

"Oh, by the way, Colonel, there is another of Myrtle's old schoolmates present to-night—a most intimate friend, indeed, who would never forgive me if I permitted you to go without meeting her."

She drew me back hastily. "Edith," she said, touching the sleeve of a young woman who was slowly passing. "Edith, wait just a moment, dear; this is Colonel Curran—Myrtle Curran's brother, you know. Colonel Curran, Mrs. Brennan."

CHAPTER XVI.

The Woman I Loved.

The crucial moment had arrived, and I think my heart actually stopped beating as I stood gazing helplessly into her face. I saw her eyes open wide in astonished recognition, and then a deep flush swept over throat and cheek. For the instant I believed she would not speak, or that she would give way to her excitement and betray everything. I durst give no signal of warning, for there existed no tie between us to warrant my expecting any consideration from her. It was an instant so tense that her silence seemed like a blow. Yet it was only an instant. Then her eyes smiled into mine most frankly, and her hand was extended.

"I am more than delighted to meet you, Colonel Curran," she said calmly, although I could feel her lips tremble to the words, while the fingers I held were like ice. "Myrtle was one of my dearest friends, and she chanced to be in my mind even as we met. That was why," she added, turning toward Miss Minor, as though she felt her momentary agitation had not passed unobserved. "I was so surprised when you first presented Colonel Curran."

"I confess to having felt strangely myself," returned the other, archly, "although I believe I concealed my feelings far better than you did, Edith. Really, I thought you were going to faint. It must be that Colonel Curran exercises some strange occult influence over the weaker sex. Perhaps he is the seventh son of a seventh son; are you, Colonel? However, dear, I am safe for the present from his mysterious spell, and you will be compelled to face the danger alone, as here comes Lieutenant Hammersmith to claim the dance I've promised him."

Before Mrs. Brennan could interfere, the laughing girl had placed her hand on the Lieutenant's blue sleeve, and, with a mocking good-bye flung backward over her shoulder, vanished in the crowd, leaving us standing there alone.

The lady waited in much apparent indifference, gently tapping the floor with her neatly shod foot.

"Would you be exceedingly angry if I were to ask you to dance?" I questioned, stealing surreptitiously a glance at her proudly averted face.

"Angry? Most assuredly not," in apparent surprise. "Yet I trust you will not ask me. I have been upon the floor only once to-night. I am not at all in the mood."

"If there were chairs here I should venture to ask even a greater favor—that you would consent to sit out this set with me."

She turned slightly, lifted her eyes inquiringly to mine, and her face lightened.

"No doubt we might discover seats without difficulty in the ante-room," she answered, indicating the direction by a glance. "There do not appear to be many 'sitters' at this ball, and the few who do are not crowded."

The apartment contained, as she prophesied, but few occupants, and I conducted her to the farther end of it, where we found a comfortable divan and no troublesome neighbors.

As I glanced at her now, I marked a distinct change in her face. The old indifference, so well assumed while we were in the presence of others, had utterly vanished as by magic, and she sat looking at me in anxious yet impatient questioning.

"Captain Wayne," she exclaimed, her eyes never once leaving my face, "what does this mean? This masquerade? This wearing of the Federal uniform? This taking of another's name? This being here at all?"

"If I should say that I came hoping to see you again," I answered, scarce knowing how best to proceed or how far to put confidence in her, "what would you think?"

"If that is true, that you were extremely foolish to take such a risk for so small a reward," she returned calmly. "Nor, under these circumstances, would I remain here so much as a moment to encourage you. But it is not true. This is no light act; your very life must lie in the balance, or you could never assume such risk."

"I would trust you gladly with my life or my honor," I replied soberly. "If I had less faith in you I should not be here now. I understand that I am condemned to be shot as a spy at daybreak."

"Shot? On what authority? Who told you?"

"On the order of General Sheridan. My informant was Lieutenant Caton, of his staff."

"Shot? As a spy? Why, then, surely cannot he Frank said—Captain Wayne, halloo! I knew absolutely nothing of all this. Do you think I should ever have rested if I had dreamed that you were held under so false a charge? I promised you I would see General Sheridan on your behalf. Frank—" she hit her lip impatiently—"I was told, that is, I was led to believe that you were—had been sent North as a prisoner of war late last night. Otherwise I should have insisted upon seeing you—on pleading your cause with the General himself. The major and I breakfasted with him this morning, but your name was not mentioned, for I believed you safe."

She did not appear to realize, so deep was her present indignation and regret, that my hand had found a resting place upon her own.

"You must believe me, Captain Wayne; I could not hear to have you feel that I could prove such an ingrate."

"You need never suppose I should think that," I replied, with an earnestness of manner that caused her to glance at me in surprise. "I confidently expected to hear from you all day, and finally when no word came I became convinced some such misconception as you have mentioned must have occurred. Then it became my turn to act upon my own behalf if I would preserve my life; yet never for one moment have I doubted you or the sincerity of your pledge to me."

She waited quietly while a couple passed us and sought seats nearer the door.

"Tell me the entire story," she said gently. As quickly as possible I reviewed the salient events which had occurred since our last meeting. Without denying the presence of Major Brannan during my stormy meeting with General Sheridan, I did not dwell upon it, nor mention the personal affair that had occurred between us. Even had I not supposed the man to be her husband I should never have taken advantage of his treachery to advance my own cause. As I concluded there was a tear glistening on her long lashes, but she seemed unconscious of it, and made no attempt to dash it away.

"You have not told me all," she commented quietly. "But I can understand and appreciate the reason for your silence. I know Frank's impetuosity, and you are very kind, Captain Wayne, to spare my feelings, but you must not remain here; every moment of delay increases your danger. Sheridan and those of his staff who would surely recognize you were expected back before this, and may appear at any moment—yet how can you get away? how is it possible for me to assist you?"

There was an eager anxiety in her face that piqued me. Like most lovers I chose to give it a wrong interpretation.

"You are anxious to be rid of me?" I asked, ashamed of the words even as I uttered them.

"That remark is unworthy of you," and she arose to her feet almost haughtily. "My sole thought in this is the terrible risk you incur in remaining here."

"Your interest then is personal to me, may I believe?"

"I am a loyal woman," proudly, "and would do nothing whatever to imperil the cause of my country; but your condemnation is unjust, and I am, in a measure, responsible for it. I assist you, Captain Wayne, for your own sake, and in response to my individual sense of honor."

"Have you formulated any plan?" she asked quickly, and her rising color made me feel that she had deciphered my struggle in my eyes.

"Only to walk out under protection of this uniform, and when once safe in the open to trust that some good fortune which has thus far befriended me."

She shook her head doubtfully, and stood a moment in silence, looking thoughtfully at the moving figures in the room beyond.

"I fear it cannot be done without arousing suspicion," she said at last, slowly. "I chance to know there are unusual precautions being taken to-night, and the entire camp is doubly patrolled. Even this house has a cordon of guards about it, but for what reason I have not learned. No," she spoke decisively, "there is no other way. Captain Wayne, in going to try to save you tonight, but in doing so I must trust my reputation in your keeping."

"I will protect it with my life."

"Protect it with your silence, rather. I know you to be a gentleman, or I should never attempt to carry out the only means of escape which seems at all feasible. Discovery would place me in an extremely embarrassing position, and I must rely upon you to protect me from such a possibility."

"I beg you," I began, "do not compromise yourself in any way for my sake."

"But I am myself already deeply involved in this," she interrupted, "and I could retain no peace of mind were I to do otherwise. Now listen. Make your way back to the hall-room, and in fifteen minutes from now be engaged in conversation with General Carlton near the main entrance. I shall join you there, and you will take your cue from me. You understand?"

"Perfectly, but—"

"There is no 'but,' Captain Wayne, only do not fail me."

Our eyes met for an instant; what she read in mine God knows—in hers was determination, with a daring strange to woman. The next moment she had vanished through a side door, and I was alone.

CHAPTER XVII.

Through the Camp of the Enemy.

A glance at my watch told me that it was already within a few moments of midnight. There was, however, no diminution in the festivities, and I waited in silence until I heard the sentries calling the hour, and then pressed my way back into the noisy, crowded hall-room. I was stopped twice by well-meaning officers whom I had met earlier in the evening, but breaking away from them after the exchange of a sentence or two, I urged my course as directly as possible toward where the spectacled brigadier yet held his post as master of ceremonies.

We had been conversing pleasantly for several minutes when Mrs. Brannan appeared. Standing so as to face the stairs, I saw her first coming down, and noted that she wore her hat, and had a light walking-cloak thrown over her shoulders. My heart beat faster as I realized for the first time that she intended to be my companion.

"Oh, General, I am exceedingly glad to find you yet here," she exclaimed as she came up, and extended a neatly gloved hand to him. "I have a favor to ask which I am told you alone have the authority to grant."

He bowed gallantly.

"I am very sure," he returned smiling.

"Halt! This Road is Closed."

ingly, "that Mrs. Brannan will never request anything which I would not gladly yield."

She flashed her eyes brightly into his face.

"Most assuredly not. The fact is, General, Colonel Curran, with whom I see you are already acquainted, was to pass the night at the Major's quarters, and as he has not yet returned, the duty has naturally devolved upon me to see our guest safely deposited. We are at the Mitchell House, you remember, which is beyond the inner lines; and while, of course, I have been furnished with a pass," she held up the paper for his inspection, "and have been also instructed as to the countersign, I fear this will scarcely suffice for the safe passage of the Colonel."

The General laughed good-humoredly, evidently pleased with her assumption of military knowledge.

"Colonel Curran is certainly to be congratulated upon having found so charming a guide, madam, and I can assure you I shall most gladly do my part toward the success of the expedition. The Major was expected back before this, I believe?"

"He left word that if he had not returned by twelve I was to wait for him no longer, as he should go directly to his quarters. I find the life of a soldier to be extremely uncertain."

"We are our country's servants, madam," he replied proudly, and then taking out a pad of blanks from his pocket, turned to me.

"May I ask your full name and rank, Colonel?"

"Patrick L. Curran, Colonel, Sixth Ohio Light Artillery."

He wrote it down rapidly, tore off the paper, and handed it to me.

"That will take you safely through our inner guard lines," he said gravely, "that being as far as my jurisdiction extends. Good-night, Colonel; good-night, Mrs. Brannan."

We bowed ceremoniously, and the next moment Mrs. Brannan and I were out upon the steps, breathing the cool night air. I glanced curiously at her face as the gleam of light fell upon it—how calm and reserved she appeared, and yet her eyes were aglow with intense excitement. At the foot of the steps she glanced up at the dark, projecting roof far above us.

"Do you suppose he can possibly be up there yet?" she asked, in a tone so low as to be inaudible to the ears of the sentry.

"Who? Bungay?" I questioned in surprise, for my thoughts were elsewhere. "Oh, he was like a cat, and there are traces at the rear. Probably he is safe long ago, or else a prisoner once more."

Beyond the gleam of the uncovered windows all was wrapped in complete darkness, save that here and there we could distinguish the dull red glare of camp-fires where the company cooks were yet at work, or some sentry post had been established. We turned sharply to the left, and proceeded down a comparatively smooth road, which seemed to me to possess a rock basis, it felt so hard. From the position of the stars I judged our course to be eastward, but the night was sufficiently obscured to shroud all objects more than a few yards distant. Except for the varied camp noises on either side of us the evening was oppressively still, and the air had the late chill of high altitudes. Mrs. Brannan pressed more closely to me as we passed beyond the narrow zone of light, and unconsciously we fell into step together.

A few hundred yards farther a fire burned radiantly against a pile of logs. The forms of several men lay out stretched beside it, while a sentry paced back and forth, in and out of the range of light. We were almost upon him before he noted our approach, and in his haste he swung his musket down from his shoulder until the point of its bayonet nearly touched my breast.

"Halt!" he cried sternly, peering at us in evident surprise. "Halt! this road is closed."

"Valley Forge," whispered the girl, and I noticed how white her face appeared in the flaming of the fire.

"The word is all right, Miss," returned the fellow, stoutly, yet without lowering his obstructing gun. "But we cannot pass any one out on the countersign alone. If you was going the other way it would answer."

"But we are returning from the officers' ball," she urged anxiously, "and are one our way to Major Brannan's quarters. We have passes."

As she drew the paper from out her glove one of the men at the fire sprang to his feet and strode across the narrow road toward us. He was smooth of face and boyish looking, but wore corporal's stripes.

"What is it, Maize?" he asked sharply.

Without waiting an answer he took the paper she held out and scanned it rapidly.

"This is all right," he said, handing it back, and lifting his cap in salute. "You may pass, madam. You must pardon us, but the orders are exceedingly strict to-night. Have you a pass also, Colonel?" I handed it to him; and after a single glance it was returned.

"Pass them, guard," he said curtly, standing aside.

Beyond the radiance of the fire she broke the silence.

"I shall only be able to go with you so far as the summit of the hill yonder, for our quarters are just to the right, and I could furnish no excuse for being found beyond that point," she said. "Do you know enough of the country to make the line of your army?"

"If this is the Kendallville pike we are on," I answered, "I have a pretty clear conception of what lies ahead, but I should be very glad to know where I am to look for the outer picket."

"There is one post at the ford over the White Branch," she replied. "I chance to know that because Major Brannan selected this station, and remarked that the stream was so high and rapid as to be impassable at any other point for miles. But I regret this is as far as my information extends."

I started to say something—what I hardly know—when, almost without sound of warning, a little squad of horsemen swept over the brow of the hill in our front, their forms darkly outlined against the starlit sky, and rode down toward us at a sharp trot. I had barely time to swing my companion out of the track when they clattered by, their heads bent low to the wind, and seemingly oblivious to all save the movements of their leader.

"Sheridan!" I whispered, for even in that dimness I had not failed to recognize the short, erect figure which rode in front.

The woman shuddered, and drew closer within my protecting shadow. Then out of the darkness there burst a solitary rider, his horse limping as if crippled, and would have ridden as down, had I not flung up one hand and grasped his bridle-rein.

"Great Scott! what have we here?" he cried roughly, peering down at us. "By all the gods, a woman!"

The hand upon my arm clutched me desperately, and my own heart seemed to choke back every utterance. The voice was Brennan's.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Reputation of a Woman.

Like a flash occurred to me the only possible means by which we might escape open discovery—an instant disclosure of my supposed rank, coupled with indignant protest. Already, believing me merely some private soldier straying out of bounds with a woman of the camp as companion, he had thrown himself from the saddle to investigate. Whatever was to be done must be accomplished quickly, or it would prove all too late. To think was to act. Stepping instantly in front of the shrinking girl and facing him, I said sternly:

"Put Down Your Pistol," She Ordered Coldly.

"I do not know who you may chance to be, sir, nor greatly care, yet your words and actions imply an insult to this lady which I am little disposed to overlook. For your information permit me to state, I am Colonel Curran, Sixth Ohio Light Artillery, and am not accustomed to being halted on the road by every drunken fool who sports a uniform."

He stopped short in complete surprise, staring at me through the darkness, and I doubted not was perfectly able to distinguish the glint of buttons and gleam of braid.

"Your pardon, sir," he ejaculated at last. "I mistook you for some runaway soldier. But I failed to catch your words; how did you name yourself?"

"Colonel Curran, of Major-General Halleck's staff."

"The hell you are! Curran had a full year heard a month ago."

He took a step forward, and before I could recover from the first numbing shock of surprise was peering intently into my face.

"Damn it!" he cried, tugging viciously at a revolver in his belt. "I know that face! You are the meanest Johnny Reb I brought in day before yesterday."

There came a quick flutter of drapery at my side, and she, pressing me firmly backward, faced him without a word.

The man's extended arm dropped to his side as though pierced by a bullet, and he took one step backward, shrinking as if his startled eyes beheld a ghost.

"Edith!" he cried, as though doubting his own vision, and the ring of agony in his voice was almost piteous. "Edith! My God! You here, at midnight, alone with this man?"

However the words, the tone, the gesture may have stung her, her face remained proudly calm, her voice cold and clear.

"I certainly am, Major Brannan," she answered, her eyes never once leaving his face. "And may I ask what reason you can have to object?"

"Reason?" His voice had grown hoarse with passion and surprise. "My God, how can you ask? How can you even face me? Why do you not sink down in shame? Alone here," he looked about him into the darkness—"at such an hour in company, with a Rebel, a sneaking, cowardly spy, already condemned to be shot. By Heaven! he shall never live to boast of it!"

He flung up his revolver barrel to prove the truth of his threat, but stopped directly between us, and shielded me with her form.

"Put down your pistol," she ordered coldly. "I assure you that there is no immediate danger to me, and you have no right to shoot me, and your wife is certainly and my heart belongs to you." (Glad to see the end of it.)

KENTUCKY NEIGHBORS.

Mr. Nunemaker dropped dead at the mouth of Toler creek, Floyd-co. last week as he was going to his mill to work.

Prestonsburg is still growing. Every carpenter in or around the town is being worked full time. There are several new buildings going up now. Many others are being repaired or added to.

The people of Bath county will welcome any reasonable plan for a railroad into their county, but they have seen so many railroads built through the county—on paper—that many of them will have to be shown.

Henry Justice, aged 60, fell dead as he was washing Sunday morning at his home on the Forks of Ferguson creek, Pike county. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of old age. The deceased is survived by a wife and two children.

Mr. W. P. Oldham brought us a stalk of corn raised on the Hurt farm, that measured ten feet from the roots to the first ear of corn. The corn must have been sixteen or seventeen feet high from the roots to the top of the tassel.—Mt Sterling Advocate.

Last Saturday night the natural gas was turned on and for the first time in the history of Salyersville she was lighted up with gas. Some of the citizens seem to realize that the county seat was entering on a new epoch of its history and caused all the bells to ring out the glad tidings.

Roe Hart and John Coyle shipped last Saturday a carload of the highest-priced turkeys ever shipped from Bath county. They were the pooled turkeys of the Harper's Branch neighborhood, and they brought their owners 17 cents a pound on foot at their homes.—Owingsville Outlook.

Hazel Green, Ky., Dec. 20.—While working at a sawmill yesterday Kash Bach, 16, of Burkhardt, six miles southeast of here, was accidentally pushed onto a running circular saw. His right hand was entirely cut off. His left hand severely lacerated and his hat brim sawed off within one inch of his head.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Dec. 29.—Death ended the sufferings of J. M. Pieratt here this morning. He had been suffering from blood poisoning for practically three months from the effects of a rat bite on the finger. Mr. Pieratt was 70 years old and is survived by a wife and three children. He was one of the best known men in Eastern Kentucky.

Carlisle, Ky., Dec. 19.—"I took it," said Ollie Mers, as he pointed to a bottle of carbolic acid when he fell dying at his home at Moorefield, this county, Wednesday. Mers was 32 years old, and an unmarried farmer. He is said to have been brooding over financial affairs. He had threatened to take his life, but his friends did not believe he was in earnest.

George Oldfield a few days since had a Duroc Jersey sow to drop 21 well developed pigs. This is the seventh litter, and she has previously produced 89, as follows: First, 14; second, 14; third, 15; fourth, 10; fifth, 18; sixth, 18.—a total of 110 pigs, and she is now less than six years old.—Hazel Green Herald.

Snelling & Anderson, on the farm of Nelson Fant, formerly the John F. Lander farm, Fleming county, gathered a little over 100 bushels of corn to the acre from one field of 8 acres. There are other 100-bushel yields talked about and we shall be glad to record them if given the facts. Fleming county does not take a back seat when it comes to corn growing.

J. M. Bowling, of Pikeville, Ky., Progressive candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney at the November election in the Thirty-fifth judicial district, filed a petition in the Letcher Circuit Court against R. Monroe Fields contesting the result of the election in the race for commonwealth's attorney. Mr. Bowling makes some grave charges against the election methods of certain politicians in this section.

Winchester, Ky.—According to Dr. I. A. Shirley, of the Rockefeller Foundation Fund for the eradication of hookworm, who has just finished a campaign against the hookworm in Breathitt county, that of the 1,785 persons examined, 1,263 were infested with hookworm, including 693 with hookworm and some other intestinal parasite.

According to Dr. Shirley, Breathitt is the first county in Eastern Kentucky to take up a systematic campaign against the disease.

Whitesburg, Ky., Dec. 21.—As a result of an old grudge "Fay" Hall, 23, a laborer, of McRoberts, shot and almost instantly killed Floyd Collins, 22, formerly of the Rock-house section of the county. The men met near the company's store and began quarreling. In the heat of the quarrel Collins ran off. As he went Hall shot him in the back with a pistol. Hall was arrested and brought to jail here to await trial.

Pikeville, Ky., Dec. 21.—Charging intimidation and bribery and general corruption of the ballot, J. M. Roberson, Democratic nominee for Circuit Judge, has filed a petition in the Pike Circuit Court, contesting the election of John F. Butler, Republican. It is also charged that the Republican party used money to corrupt the voters and that a fund of at least $8,000, and probably as large as $15,000, was used in Pike and Letcher counties to bribe and corrupt voters. Butler was elected, on the face of the returns, by a majority of 124.

The petition was filed by E. B. Stephenson, chief counsel for Mr. Roberson. His associates in the case are E. B. Stratton, Hobson & Hobson, R. H. Cooper, Willis Staton, F. W. Stowers, J. E. Childers and Geo. Finson, Jr.

This contest is the second filed this week. J. M. Bowling, Progressive is contesting the election of R. Monroe Fields, Republican, to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney. He declared over 2,400 voters were bribed to vote for Fields.

My Lady of the North.

reaches Captain Wayne."

"Truly, you must indeed love him," he sneered.

So close to me was she standing that I could feel her form tremble at this insult, yet her voice remained emotionless.

"Your uncalculated words shame me, not my actions. In being here with Captain Wayne tonight I am merely paying a simple debt of honor—a double debt, indeed, considering that he was condemned to death by your lie, while you deceived me by another."

"Did he tell you that?"

"He did not. Like the true gentleman he has ever shown himself to be, he endeavored to disguise the facts, to withhold from me all knowledge of your dastardly action. I know it by the infamous sentence pronounced against him and by your falsehood to me."

"Edith, you mistake," he urged anxiously. "I was told that he had been sent North."

She drew a deep breath, as though she could scarcely grasp the full audacity of his pretense to ignorance.

"You appeared to be fully informed but now as to his death sentence."

"Yes, I heard of it while away, and intended telling you as soon as I reached our quarters."

I could feel the acorn of his miserable deception as it curled her lip, and her figure seemed to straighten between us.

"Then," she said slowly, "you will doubtless agree that I have done no more than was right, and will therefore permit him this chance of escape from so unmerited a fate; for you know as well as I do that he has been wrongly condemned."

He stepped forward with a half-smothered oath, and rested one hand heavily upon her shoulder.

"I rather guess not, madam," he said. "Damn him! I will hang him now higher than Haman, just to show Queen Esther that it can be done. Out of the way, madam!"

Rendered desperate by her slight resistance and his own jealous hatred, he thrust the woman aside so rudely that she fell forward upon one knee. His revolver was yet in his right hand, gleaming in the starlight, but before he could raise or fire it I had grasped the steel barrel firmly, and the hammer came down noisily upon the flesh of my thumb. The next instant we were locked close together in fierce struggle for the mastery. He was the heavier, stronger man; I the younger and quicker. From the first every effort on both sides was put forth solely to gain command of the weapon—his to fire, mine to prevent, for I knew well at the sound of the discharge there would come a rush of blue-coats to his rescue. My first fierce onset had put him on the defensive, but as we tugged and strained his superiority in weight began to tell, and slowly he bore me backward, until all the weight of my body rested upon my right leg. Then there occurred to me like a flash a wrestler's trick taught me years before by an old negro on my father's plantation. Instantly I appeared to yield to the force against which I contended with simulated weakness, sinking lower and lower, until, I doubt not, Brennan felt convinced I must go over backward. But as I thus sank, my left foot found steady support farther back, while my free hand sank slowly down his straining body until my groping fingers grasped firmly the broad belt about his waist. I yielded yet another inch, until he leaned so far over me as to be out of all balance, and then, with sudden straightening of my left leg, at the same time forcing my head beneath his chest in leverage, with one tremendous effort I flung him, head under, crashing down upon the hard road. Trembling like a reed from the exertion, I stood there looking down upon the dark form lying huddled at my feet. He rested motionless, and I bent over, placing my hand upon his heart, horrified at the mere thought that he might be dead. But the heart beat, and with a prayer of thankfulness I looked up. She stood beside me.

"Tell me, Captain Wayne," she exclaimed anxiously, "he is not—not seriously hurt?"

"I believe not," I answered soberly. "He is a heavy man, and fell hard, yet his heart beats strong. He must have cut his head upon a stone, however, for he is bleeding."

She knelt beside him, and I caught the whiteness of a handkerchief within her hand.

"Believe me, Mrs. Brennan," I faltered lamely, "I regret this far more than I can tell. Nothing has ever occurred to me to give greater pain than the thought that I have brought you so much of sorrow and trouble. You will have faith in me?"

"Always, everywhere—whether it ever be our fate to meet again or not. But now you must go."

"Go? And leave you here alone? Are you not afraid?"

"Afraid?" she looked about her into the darkness. "Of what? Surely you do not mean of Frank—of Major Brennan? And, as to my being alone, our quarters are within a scant hundred yards from here, and a single cry will bring me aid in plenty. Hush! what was that?"

It was the shuffling tread of many feet, the sturdy tramp of a body of infantry on the march.

"Go!" she cried hurriedly. "If you would truly serve me, if you care at all for me, do not longer delay and be discovered here. It is the grandest chance I beg of you, go!"

I grasped her outstretched hand, pressed my lips softly upon it, and sped with unobscured footsteps down the dark, deserted road.

was commanded to keep a still tongue concerning their marriage, but it being holidays and the good minister thinking that he had kept silent long enough, sent the little bird that is always carrying news all the way from Ironton to Kentucky, with the glad tidings. The groom is the youngest son of Mrs. F. M. Diamond of Maple Grove. He is a handsome, industrious, enterprising young man, the type of one who is to make their mark in the business line of the world. The bride is the youngest and only remaining daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Yates, and is one of the most beautiful and highly esteemed young ladies of Fallsburg. We are sorry to lose her out of our midst, but heartily congratulate the groom on his good luck in securing for his wife such an excellent young lady. May their pathway ever be strewn with flowers and their married life be one of eternal happiness and bliss, is the sincere wish of their many friends.

A FRIEND.

Hazel Green, Ky., Dec. 21.—Morace Bollamy, 14, son of John Bollamy, a farmer of Greasy, four miles from here, is suffering from a wound received in an unusual manner. The boy's big toe has been diseased for some time, and his father told him to catch a horse and they would drive to town and have his toe treated. He replied, "But, father, I can get rid of it easier than that." Whereupon he slipped onto a shotgun and presumably started hunting. A few minutes later the family heard the gun fire, and started in search of the boy. He had put his foot on a rock and the muzzle of the gun against the affected toe and fired. The foot was badly hurt and burned. He is in a precarious condition.
